Making the decision to file for divorce is messy, emotional, frightening, and in most cases, life altering. Yet, the freedom that can result…it is a wondrous new beginning. In fact, it is with great joy that I have observed many of my clients reinvent themselves after a divorce—spiritually, mentally, socially, professionally, physically. Many have found the new loves of their lives; some have taken steps towards furthering their education and/or starting a new career; and others have discovered new interests and hobbies or simply basked in their new-found peace. You may find that deciding to leave an unhealthy marriage is your first step towards your wondrous new beginning, and with my 14 years of experience in tow, and a strong sense of compassion, I am ready to help you.
